KILAUEA MILITARY CAMP ROCKS

Big Island resort offers great resource to service members

Cpl. Jason E. Miller
Combat Correspondent

KILAUEA, Hawaii — Spending your vacation at a military camp on a steaming volcano probably doesn't sound like a lot of fun, but Kilauea Military Camp on the Big Island is just that, and it's not only a great time, it's also an experience that a visitor will likely never forget.

Located in the federally protected Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, a tourist destination unto itself, KMC is a unique getaway for anyone, and getting there is quick. The flight from Oahu to Hilo International Airport lasts only about 45 minutes.

The advantage of having such a military friendly resort so close to service members stationed on Oahu is great because one doesn't have to travel to the mainland for a real "get-away." A vacation to KMC can be had for a fraction of the cost of visiting a similar resort in the continental United States.

The camp houses its guests in rustic cabins, which are fully furnished and offered in numerous sizes to accommodate any number of people a party wishes to bring. Brick fireplaces — handy at KMC's cabins 4,000-feet above sea level — offer a sense of coziness one wouldn't expect to find at a resort here in the tropics.

Kilauea Military Camp is located about 45 minutes from downtown Hilo, so shopping and sight-seeing are easy to come by, as no vacation would be complete without souvenirs. But perhaps the most attractive feature of KMC is its convenient location within Hawaii Volcanoes National Park.

Driving through the park, at times, is like tearing pages out of a history book. The geologically active site makes for interesting visuals, with rising steam and cragged rock that seem to transport viewers back to the beginnings of this island. The marked lava flows, from eruptions within the past 100 years, actually give evidence of when the land was created, and add a sense of perspective to the geological marvel.

The miles of formerly molten rocks seem to flow until they meet the crashing Pacific at the park's edge on Hawaii's western shore. The park boasts a large welcoming facility, full of information to make a visit to the park's numerous craters, lava tubes and past and present flows an interesting and educational visit.

Tours of the Big Island through KMC are a must-add for most camp visitors. Instead of heading to Hilo to book guided tours, many staying at KMC decide that KMC Tours is the way to go. The camp provides several tour packages that can accommodate those wishing to learn more about the island such as the Mauna Loa macadamia nut farm; numerous natural wonders like waterfalls, lava tubes, black and green sand beaches; and a ton of other photo-friendly sites guaranteed to impress your family and friends back home.

Back at KMC, there are also several amenities to take advantage of, including a bowling alley, a karaoke bar, a restaurant, a game room and other activities in which to unwind after a day of exploring Hawaii's biggest and most diverse island — offering everything from rain forests, to beaches, to snow-covered mountain tops, and even barren, desolate deserts.

Kilauea Military Camp is a true resource that Kilauea Military Camp is located on 50 acres, within the confines of Hawaii Volcanoes National Park. Established in 1916, it is one of Hawaii's most unique military resorts and has hosted millions of service members, their families and guests since it first opened.

Set 4,000 feet above sea level, every apartment and cabin at Kilauea Military Camp offer amenities such as a mini-refrigerator, coffee maker, electric heater and a fire-place. Other amenities on the property include a fitness center, bowling lanes, basketball and tennis courts.

three women, living or working on MCB Hawaii, who have made positive contributions to others.

Take this opportunity to help recognize that special female who has made a positive impact in someone's life — large or small — by submitting a 300-word-or-less essay.

Submissions may be hand delivered or e-mailed to editor@hawaii-marine.com, and must be received at the Hawaii Marine office in Bldg. 216 by March 5 at 1 p.m. Winning entries will be printed in the Hawaii Marine in the March 12 issue. Call 257-8836 for more information.

Resource Efficiency Manager
Energy Office, Facilities
Department

Improving energy efficiency and reducing energy waste at Marine Corps Base Hawaii by just 10 percent could generate nearly $1.3 million in savings each year — savings that would help secure jobs and fund facility repairs and improvements.

To achieve these savings, the Facilities Department has underway an aggressive energy program emphasizing energy awareness, a Utility Conservation Monitor (UCM) program, training of UCMs and energy personnel, and energy-smart facilities.

Integral to the MCB Hawaii energy program is a commitment to improving workplace comfort and quality of life.

“We want personnel to understand that energy efficiency does not mean going without; it means learning about opportunities to be more efficient and changing wasteful practices and habits,” says Bill Nutting, base energy manager.

Major energy-saving initiatives such as lighting retrofits, cooling system improvements, water conservation programs, and prioritizing the use of energy-efficient materials and systems in new construction and renovations have been and will continue to be implemented at MCB Hawaii.

True success, however, can only be achieved if all military and civilian personnel make energy efficiency a part of their daily lives. It should be just as routine as safety awareness with these simple steps.

Turn off task lighting and overhead lights when leaving an area.

Turning off 1,000 watts of lighting for 10 hours per week will save 520 kilowatt hours and $52 each year when electricity costs 10 cents per kilowatt hours. It currently costs the base 10.4 cents per kilowatt hours.

Set air conditioning thermostats at 76 degrees or higher.

For every degree you lower the temperature, the energy costs rise by 6 percent. A temperature setting of 75 degrees costs 18 percent more; a 72-degree setting costs 36 percent more.

Keep air-conditioned space boundaries secure.

Close doors and windows when the air conditioner is running. On hot days, draw the curtains and/or shades to keep the sun out. Turn off the A/C at night or when the space being cooled is unoccupied for longer than an hour.

Be energy smart with office equipment.

Turn off office equipment or set it to “power down” when not in use. Setting computers, monitors and copiers to use sleep-mode when not in use helps cut energy costs by approximately 40 percent. Remember to turn equipment off at the end of the workday.

Base Energy Manager Bill Nutting says energy efficiency doesn’t mean going without, but rather, simply replacing wasteful habits to energy-saving ones.

Repair or report report leaking plumbing fixtures at once.

A dripping faucet can waste six – 10 gallons of water a day. The cause is most often a worn-out washer. Replacing it takes just a few minutes.

Turn off outside lights during the day.

If there is no switch, check for a faulty photocell or timer and have it repaired/replaced. A typical outside security light wastes approximately $44 per year in electricity costs when left on all day long.

Club gets word out on blood shortage

Pfc. Bernadette L. Ainsworth
U.S. Marine Corps Forces Pacific

CAMP H. M. SMITH — There is always a shortage of blood in the United States, but for the military there is virtually no spare blood supply.

Recently, members of the Camp Smith Military Spouses Club attended a meeting at Tripler Army Medical Center and were surprised at what they learned there.

“If Tripler doesn’t have blood to supply to the military, then we have to buy it from the Red Cross. Right now, they [Tripler] are dangerously low on blood,” said Cathy Coffee, a member of the spouses club.

In response to the shortage of blood, the spouses club put together a blood drive at the Pollack Theater on Feb. 18.

“Camp Smith is not well known and we want to be recognized and remembered for doing a real community service,” said Rae-Ann Bonilla, acting presi-

Platelet donors sought

Compiled by
Hawaii Marine Staff

HONOLULU — Tripler Army Medical Center’s blood and platelet supplies are low, so TAMC needs donors.

Thousands of lifesaving medical treatments require patients to receive platelet transfusions such as victims of cancer, organ or bone marrow transplants, trauma and open-heart surgery. However, since platelets can only be stored for five days, the need for these donations is vast and continuous.

Platelets are necessary because they are the blood cells that help control bleeding by promoting blood clots.

During apheresis (ay-fur-ee-sis), the special kind of blood donation that allows donors to give specific blood components, only two tablespoons of platelets are collected from the whole blood donation; the remaining components — red cells and plasma — are returned to the donor.

The donation process is safe and painless. Platelet donors are not at risk of bleeding problems or contracting diseases from the donation process because the equipment is sterile and discarded after each

3rd Fleet to sponsor bone marrow drive

U.S. Navy 3rd Fleet
Press Release

HONOLULU — Did you know that there are nearly 500 military personnel and family members in DoD alone who need a bone marrow transplant? You could be the miracle match for someone diagnosed with diseases that have no other effective treatment. All it takes is a simple blood test to register.

Commander 3rd Fleet will be hosting the following series of bone marrow donor drives on the island of Oahu:

- March 10, 10 a.m. – 4 p.m. at Schofield Barracks Post Exchange,
- March 11 & 12, 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. at the Navy Exchange, Pearl Harbor,
- March 11, 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. at Hickam Air Force Base Exchange, and
- March 12, 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. at MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay.

Any DoD employee, military and family member over the age of 18, and under the age of 60, can be tested. You can also register even if you have taken antimalaria medication, obtained a recent tattoo or served in the United Kingdom, Europe, Iraq or Africa.

“Bone marrow type is different than blood type, so even if you’ve been told you can’t give blood, you can most likely still join the bone marrow registry,” said Navy Lt. Fred Dini of San Diego, Calif., whose daughter has been diagnosed with a rare form of

“The test is easy to do; it’s just a tablespoon of blood. All it takes is about ten minutes and you’re done,” said Navy Lt. Cindy Campbell, Commander 3rd Fleet’s bone marrow donor coordinator. “If you’re ever called to be a donor, the procedure to remove bone marrow is very simple. It takes less than sixty minutes.

“There is a lot of misinformation about this minor procedure. It’s a small thing to do to save a life; that’s the point that I want people to remember. Think about your own children or how you would feel if you had leukemia and someone could match you, but didn’t bother to register.”

An estimated 30,000 children and adults in the U.S. are diagnosed each year with leukemia, aplastic anemia or other fatal blood diseases. For many, the only hope for survival is a marrow transplant because nearly 70 percent of these patients cannot find a match within their own family. They must find unrelated marrow donors.

On the day of the drive, blood will be drawn and tested to determine the donor’s Human Leukocyte Antigen (HLA) type. After typing, the donor’s name will be placed on the National Bone Marrow Donor Registry.

The DoD Bone Marrow Center maintains a military contingency mission, to provide immediate donor searches and donor follow up in the event of a mass casualty incident involving chemical or radiation exposure or related industrial accidents.

“This is the first drive held in over three years in Hawaii. All personnel should take a few minutes to stop by one of the locations to get tested. I can’t stress how important this is. You may be able to save someone’s life. Imagine how wonderful it would be to have the chance to give someone with leukemia, a chance for full recovery,” emphasized Campbell.

“I urge everyone to look into their hearts and ask themselves what they can do now to never let this happen again. You can never know when your family will be the next in need,” added Dini.

Donors can find out more information at www.dodmarrow.com, or by contacting Lt. j.g. Erin Bailey at Naval Station Pearl Harbor, 473-2883.

2nd Fisher House opens at Tripler

HONOLULU — Tripler Army Medical Center celebrated the opening of its second Fisher House on the grounds of Tripler Army Medical Center Feb. 19.

The house is located directly across the street from the first Fisher House on the Tripler campus. It has room for 11 family suites, and is approximately 7,700 square feet, said Robin Renee Strader, Tripler’s Fisher House manager. Now, accommodations provide for 18 eligible families receiving medical care at Tripler, with two rooms in the first home handicapped accessible, six in the new home.

Webb Jr., commander of Tripler; U.S. Senator Daniel K. Inouye, of Hawaii; Lt. Gen. James B. Peake, the Army Surgeon General; and Admiral Thomas B. Fargo, commander, U.S. Pacific Command.

House is there to provide comfort and an affordable place to stay while loved ones receive care at Tripler. The value of

Fisher Houses has such a positive impact on the families who are guests in these homes throughout the world, said

Strader.

“Since the first Fisher home opened up at Tripler in 1995, families have saved close to $3 million in expenses,” she said. “Families have come from such places as Korea, Guam, American Samoa, the outer Hawaiian Islands, Okinawa, the Philippines, and many other areas in the Pacific.”

Fisher Houses have all the conveniences of home, including Internet access and a sitting room and dining area. Hot meals are served to guests, the house is often decorated for the holidays, and drivers are available for quick runs to the commissary.

Yet, very few of these amenities would be available if it were not for volunteers.

“Volunteers are critical,” Strader said, explaining that the Fisher Foundation builds and gives the Fisher Houses to the Army. Upon receipt, the gaining installation is responsible for operation and maintenance.

“It costs approximately $133,000 to run each house a year,” Strader said, “and we run on donations and volunteers. Our volunteers are heaven sent and contribute a great deal of support to our families. Volunteers make the house a home.”

The average length of stay at the houses on Tripler grounds is 12 days — one of the longest average stays of any of the Fisher houses.

Many members of the generous Fisher family — led by Kenneth Fisher, chairman of the Board of Trustees, Fisher House Foundation, Inc. — participated in the ceremony that honored

Students put face to Marines

Cpl. Monroe F. Seigle
Community Relations Clerk

KANEOHE — “What comes to mind when you hear the word ‘Marine?’” asked a Marine of several young teenagers in a classroom setting. Many of the students from King Intermediate School, ranging from ages 12-15, only could come up with the fact that Marines fire several different weapons and do a lot of training in the water.

The curious middle school students spent close to an hour on Monday with Marines from MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, during the school’s Career Day. They asked the devil dogs diverse questions regarding daily life, recruit training, and travel/educational opportunities in the Corps.

By the time the class came to an end, the students had learned that Marines, indeed, used to be students much like themselves, and Marines still enjoy several of the same hobbies they do in their spare time.

“The students can see MCB Hawaii from the school, and often wonder what goes on there,” said Kris Jenness, guest speaker coordinator for King Intermediate School. “I thought it would be a good idea for the students to get a chance to meet some of the Marines firsthand and learn about what they do on a daily basis.

“I think military service is a great way for many students to begin their life after they graduate high school,” added Jenness.

Sergeant Chris Eastman, a combat engineer with Combat Service Support Group 3 brought live, video footage of Marines working with explosives at the Pohakuloa Training Area on the Big Island of Hawaii during a recent training evolution. When the students got a glimpse of what hundreds of pounds of explosives looks like when it detonates, many agreed they thought being an engineer would be an interesting job.

“I was surprised at how excited the kids were when they saw the explosions on TV,” said Eastman. “I guess that since I see that kind of stuff on a regular basis, I am used to it. I brought the tape just so they could get an idea of what I do; I had no idea they would get so excited, but I am glad they enjoyed it.”

Before leaving the school, two Marines talked to students with behavior disorders, who had, had a few run-ins with the juvenile court system. One Marine explained to students that just because they make mistakes when they are young, they can still learn from their mistakes, recover and do great things with their life.

“I was impressed with how the Marines presented themselves to the students,” said Jenness. “I hope the Marines will be able to return to our school again.”

the Fisher Family’s dedication to providing “homes away from home” for active duty service members, their families, military retirees and their families, other veterans, and many Pacific Island families who receive medical care at Tripler.

Lieutenant Gen. James L. Campbell, commanding general of U.S. Army Pacific, hosted the ceremony. Senator Daniel K. Inouye, the third most-senior member of the U.S. Senate, spoke at the invitation of the Fisher family.

The official party also included Lt. Gen. (Dr.) James B. Peake, the U.S. Army Surgeon General, U.S. Army Medical Command, and Maj. Gen. Joseph G. Webb Jr., commanding general of the Pacific Regional Medical Command of which Tripler is an integral part.

Tripler’s second Fisher House is the 32nd home built by the Fisher House Foundation. There are currently two homes in Germany, 17 homes on military installations and six Veterans Affairs medical center homes.

Eight tips help you eat ‘just enough’

NewsUSA
Featurettes

Over the years restaurants have increased the portion size of their meals, and thus calories, which can lead to weight gain and risk for diseases like type 2 diabetes and heart disease.

For a healthier diet, it’s important to know that your first step is to look at not only what you eat, but also how much and how often you eat.

The National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases offers eight tips for controlling portion-sizes:

- 1) Eat healthy meals at regular times during the day and choose healthy snacks like fruit.
- 2) Don’t snack in front of the TV or computer.
- 3) Eat meals slowly.
- 4) Freeze food that you will not serve right away.
- 5) Keep portions under control by measuring out one serving onto a dish and eating from the dish, not from the box.
- 6) Share, order less or wrap up half your meal to take home.
- 7) Stop eating when you begin to feel full.
- 8) Don’t “super-size”; order smaller meals.

Easy, elegant brunch can entertain

NewsUSA
Featurettes

Why not show your guests the warmth of your hospitality by hosting a brunch? By inviting family and friends for brunch, you can treat them to a memorable, comforting meal.

A mid-morning brunch usually features a relatively simple egg entree. To round out a satisfying menu, all you need to add is fruit, a vegetable and, perhaps, a dessert. Altogether, a brunch is an easy, but elegant, way to entertain and often, much more economical than other gatherings, too.

Among the many ways versatile eggs can be prepared, the layered casserole called a strata is one of the easiest dishes to make. If you add interesting ingredients, a strata can also be exciting enough for a special-occasion brunch.
